

The FCC should not implement any proposed regulations which would weaken Indiana's (or any other state's) telephone privacy laws.

I was one of the early subscribers to the Indiana No Call List and the results have been amazing. I used to received several telemarketing calls a day (including Sunday mornings!) and I now receive NO such calls.

If the FCC wants to implement a No Call regulation, it should be a safety blanket which provides a real no call list without preempting stronger state laws such as the Indiana Telephone Privacy law.

Thank you,
